Defining Disney Quality Service

Understanding the needs, perceptions, and expectations of our Guests help us determine the direction of our growth. Our guiding compass always points to a need to understand and provide superior Guest experiences.

Learning Objectives:

- Create a paradigm of quality service throughout an organization of exceeding customer expectations by paying attention to service details.
- Define, differentiate and utilize customer demographics and psychographics in creating a quality customer experience.
- Create and utilize a service tool that identifies customer needs, wants, stereotypes and emotions.
- Establish a common purpose that differentiates employee tasks with a greater service goal.

Quality Standards

What good is the ability to exceed customer expectations if it can't be delivered consistently throughout the organization? When a service decision has to be made at any level, everyone should be aware of established quality standards that assist employees in making those decisions and ensuring consistent delivery.

Learning Objectives:

- Ability to define and prioritize Disney quality standards.
- Application of the steps that can help any organization develop effective quality standards.
- Increased understanding of the need for consistent service delivery by 100% of an organization's workforce.

Service Delivery Systems

In order to deliver quality service, delivery systems must be aligned. Disney, like every organization, has three primary delivery systems: Cast (employees), Setting (place of business) and Process (policies and procedures).

Cast

Our Cast is our most valuable asset and one of our most diverse. It is really a worldwide team comprised of thousands of people delivering quality service in a safe, courteous, entertaining, and efficient manner. Given the training, support and recognition they need to confidently deliver the "Disney Difference," they create "magic" everyday through proactive and responsive service. It's the reason why Disney believes that "the front line is the bottom line."

Setting

The Setting (whether physical or virtual) conveys messages about the organization's values and standards, while influencing the moods and perceptions of employees and customers. Understanding the impact of settings allows Disney to design and enhance environments with quality service in mind.

Process

Processes should never be hassles – they should be designed to remove barriers to providing excellent service. Disney works to align global and local processes in order to fully support the employee and customer experiences.

This multi-faceted system also serves as an internal and external benchmarking tool to help us monitor customer service.
